OUTMANEUVERED

Those members of the Warren Area Joint School board who say they are in favor of an adequate auditorium with a seating capacity of at least 1200, appeared very poorly prepared to present their case at the meeting, Monday night, and allowed themselves to be outmaneuvered on the floor. As the result, a minority of the area's population had its way.

No one seemed to have asked an architect or engineer how much an additional 200 seats would cost. If they had they would have learned the cost would be only $12,000. Someone asked the architect who was present and he said it would be less than $17,000. But no one followed it up to press him for the exact price, a figure he should have been prepared to give.

Consequently, all the board members present were voting either for or against a portion of the building without knowing the actual price. How could they vote intelligently concerning an unknown quantity?

Some day when a move is started to obtain money with which to build a public auditorium for this area it won't come any easier when we remember that we once could have done it for $12,000, with payments spread over thirty years!

TOO MUCH AUDITORIUM

It is difficult to understand on what basis the proponents of the 1,000-seat Warren high school auditorium were working to arrive at that figure. They argue that we can have two assemblies, with the boys and girls taking turns attending. They also say that Beaty auditorium is adequate.

Inasmuch as we do not anticipate that the new high school will have a student population exceeding 1500, why do we need 1,000 seats? It seems that another auditorium of 750 seats, such as we have at Beaty, would be sufficient.

If it is cost that concerns us and if it is a double assembly with which we are saddling our future faculties, why not really slide it to fifty per cent of the anticipated attendance?

If we are making no effort to build an auditorium that will serve the population of the entire area, then NOT EXACTLY DEMOCRATIC we need no more seating capacity In this supposedly democratic other wards enlarged or reduced to These boys by their own measuring stick are extravagantly squandering our money!

The limited thinking by the leaders of the opposition to adequacy and progressiveness in education does not surprise us. This is the kind of blindness that has cost Warren unnecessary millions for such facilities as a sewage plant, new schools, hospital and a few others most any citizen can name.

And now with a high school to be built in an expanding and prosperous area, we are not looking beyond our primer. And the main reason is that we have a few people of very limited vision in key places to constantly block progress.

Isn't it time for the Warren area to stop paying a pound for every penny supposedly saved?

In short, earthy is the word for "The Real McCoys." In fact, I can't recall anything this earthy that has ever been on television, certainly not on a situation comedy. The McCoys are a bunch of West Virginia hillbillies who have moved to California and this fact is dinned into you in a song which goes something like this: "From West Virgin-iay they came to California to stay" which isn't exactly my favorite lyric.

Walter Brennan, who has been in show business since roughly the time of Aristophanes, knows every acting trick in the duffle bag including a couple it might be just as well he forgot. He harrumphs and sniffs and heehaws his way through his lines with an astonishing profusion of sound and a surpassing grasp of technique. But --I keep asking myself -- is all that technique necessary on so slight a frame?

"The Real McCoys" only opened a couple of months ago and already it is giving a sturdy rating battle to "Climax" which is its opposition. "'The Real McCoys' is a situation comedy for the entire family played against a Western background and filled with the heart, humor and grass roots honesty of real people," it says hereina press release, I don't think I could write a sentence with as much heart, humor and grass roots honesty in it as that there press agent that wrote that there line and, by jingoes and by golly, that there sentiment sums up the show.

"In the first chapter Walter Brennan as Grandpa Amos McCoy, and his grandchildren Luke, Aunt Hassie, and little Luke and Luke's bride, Kate, after a long hard trip reach their new home in the San Fernando Valley. It seems beautiful to the family albeit a bit run down . . but it isn't very long before Grandpa Amos becomes homesick for his old cronies. Not even Pepino, an employee who comes with the ranch, can console him . . It remains for a fight with a neighbor to restore his good humor and make him finally feel at home in his new surroundings."

Well, sir, you can hardly get much closer to the earth than that, short of burying yourself. And the interesting thing is, neighbor, that this here grass roots domestic situation comedy is produced and was created by a man named Irving Pincus. Us Back To Reality

By Thomas L. Stokes

WASHINGTON -- For something no bigger than a soft ball, the earth satellite that burned itself out has become a symbol for much disillusionment after our spree of com-

No one would think that the balance of power in the world, at least psychologically, would have been so upset in so short a time in the month when Russia projected two successive balls into space and we punctured the period with a failure, as if throwing a vast interrogation mark across the skies.

Our complacency took longer in the making but, if we have cast it off, then it could be the beginning of wisdom.

In the midst of history, it is always risky to try to put a beginning to the period of retreat from hard realities. It could be when, after a fearful, bloody war in a faraway corner called Korea, and so soon after a global war, we became war-weary and wanted relief and surcease for awhile. We wanted to have a deliverer for our troubles.

If one may try to find a root of our trouble, we might suggest that it was when we, as a people, were willing to make a crime of Korea for the sake of a political issue in the 1952 campaign, that is, to forget its real meaning in the stand against aggression.

In short, we were willing to forget this was part of our national heritage. To President Truman, the decision for us to stand in Korea and join with the United Nations is still today, as at the time, one of the shining pages of our history, and the history of our age. When Russia ignited Communist North Korea, her satellite (in a different sense then), to attack South Korea, a ward of the United Nations, President Truman saw that we could do nothing but call a halt to this unprovoked aggression. Otherwise, the Communist menace would have overrun that area of the world and sought to penetrate elsewhere along the perimeter of the Communist world.

But we grew weary of the war. Our people wanted a deliverer from our troubles. At hand, as a comforter and as a healer and a unifying force among our people, there was a warm and genial personality who was at the same time a soldier, a war hero. He was induced to head a political party 20 years out of power. He became the image of peace and plenty and rest.

Shrewd party leaders, who were interested in getting a winner, hung 'Korea'' as a badge of shame to flaunt in the faces of the Democrats. It did become the leading issue. It was simple. Victory seemed certain, but just to make sure, General Eisenhower pledged at the eleventh hour in the campaign, if elected, that he would go to Korea in person. He made the trip and in time there was eventually peace after long negotiations. Victory was easy, the first time, and even easier the second time.

He created a businessman's government, over which he presided with a relaxed rein. He thought of his cabinet as the board of direc-

Hey, I Found A Fossil!

That's worth shouting about, young fella!

Those strange patterns in the rock are pages out of the past in Nature's notebook. They tell the story of life as it was, millions of years ago, when huge quantities of natural gas were formed and buried deep beneath the earth's surface.

Today, fossils serve as important signposts in man's quest for more reserves of natural gas throughout the entire Appalachian area, for they often provide the clue to new supplies.

The search for this "wonder fuel" continues at an intensive rate, to keep pace with your increasing demands for modern homes and industry. Millions of dollars yearly are spent to discover new reserves, drill new wells, deliver a steady flow of dependable, economical natural gas to you.

These efforts are well repaid because natural gas is the modern, efficient fuel. And it serves you best when you use it with modern, automatic gas appliances.

Because no such central clearing house exists, we have done the next best thing and weekly list a community calendar. You are invited to check it for open dates and available facilities. And you also are asked to reserve your own dates and facilities by calling us and providing the necessary information.

No one benefits when major events are held on the same day. The sponsors are competing in a community so small that competition is not practical. And a major share of the audience enjoys seeing all forms of entertainment.

LEARNING TO LOSE

We often have wondered which came first in this egg and chicken business as applied to sports. Does the coach or physical instructor who wins have a "learn to win" slogan

This piece isn't inspired by the recent Warren football season. In fact, we have no idea what Coach Veight's philosophy is, though we believe that his actions and efforts suggest that he believes in winning them.

We simply have a space to fill and have been wanting to get this one off for many months. What bothers us is that it seems we touched on

It always has seemed to us that that the efforts of all involved should be dedicated and bent toward that conclusion.

GOOD HUNTERS HANDICAPPED

Last week we suggested that one of the reasons the deer herd continues to remain overlarge, and the resulting animals too small, is the if he knew anything about rifles. fact that a vast majority of the men with guns in the woods are not good stranger asked him to load the GET OUT YOUR LINE hunters. The animals are so chased and frightened that they desert their normal patterns, and the good hunter who normally knows where to look and how to approach his game has much of his effort lost when hordes of hunters cross his path and upset his skillful plan.

We remember the good friend who was a very capable hunter and while moving to his position richer and there aren't so many deer for the day's hunt met a stranger fighting for it. The heavy woods, who was having trouble with the mechanism of his gun. The stranger stopped our friend and asked huskies we should have.

And he still was there, very happy about the "outing" and its rewards. Over the car laid a buck. While his friends had scientifically hunted the woods he had taken the tenderfoot's way and sat in the car. The buck, frightened by crowds of humans in his natural haunts took off for other parts, directly into the path of the man with the easy life.

When the woodlands fill up with humans, most of whom know very little about hunting, the wild life is very apt to behave unnaturally. Good hunting still is recommended, but there is no guarantee that it will always pay, as it would do if the woods were in their normal state.

BIG ONES NEAR FOOD

It is quite evident that food plays a major part in the size of deer. This is showing up even within the short days of the current season. The big racks and fat deer are being shot in farm areas. Food is a little where food is thinner and the herd is heaviest, does not provide the
